Wednesday, March 5, 1952

The Yugoslav Ambassador came to see me this morning, and said the attempt to settle the Trieste question through bilateral conversations between the Italian and Yugoslav governments had failed.

George Perkins stopped in to say goodbye.

We had lunch with Gerard de Rohan Chabot and his daughter at his house rue Colonel Combes. He is remarkably active for a man of 82 or 83.

Cy Sulzberger called on me this afternoon, and we had a long talk. Afterwards I saw Ellis Briggs who is apparently doomed to remain in Czechoslovakia until the Oatis case is finished. He thinks the Czechs will finally release this American newspaper man, regarding whom there had been so much publicity, but has no idea as to when such action might take place.

Jean Monnet came to the house to see me this evening, and we went over a variety of French matters.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE A/CDC/MR
REVIEWED BY c&c DATE 7-1-81
☐OF ADS ☐EXT. DATE
TS AUTH. REASON(S)
ENDORSE EXISTING MARKINGS ☐
DECLASSIFIED ☐ RELEASABLE ☑
RELEASE DENIED ☐
PA or FOI EXEMPTIONS

CONFIDENTIAL